Cautionary Note Regarding Forward-Looking Statements

Certain statements included in this presentation are not historical facts but are forward-looking statements for purposes of the safe harbor provisions under the United States Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. Forward-looking statements may include projections and estimates concerning the Company’s possible or assumed future results of operations, financial condition, business strategies and plans, market opportunity, competitive position, industry environment, and potential growth opportunities. In some cases, you can identify forward-looking statements by terms such as “may,” “will,” “should,” “design,” “target,” “aim,” “expect,” “could,” “intend,” “plan,” “anticipate,” “estimate,” “believe,” “continue,” “predict,” “project,” “potential,” “goal” or other words that convey the uncertainty of future events or outcomes. You can also identify forward-looking statements by discussions of strategy, plans or intentions. These forward-looking statements include, but are not limited to, statements regarding future revenue, pricing and other financial and performance metrics, and projections of market size and opportunity. These statements are based on various assumptions and on the current expectations of the Company and its management and are not predictions of actual performance. While the Company’s management considers these assumptions and expectations to be reasonable, they are inherently subject to significant business, economic, competitive, regulatory and other risks, contingencies and uncertainties, most of which are difficult to predict and many of which are beyond our control. If the risks materialize or the Company’s assumptions prove incorrect, actual results could differ materially from the results implied by these forward-looking statements. There may be additional risks that the Company currently believes are immaterial that could also cause actual results to differ from those contained in the forward-looking statements. In addition, forward-looking statements reflect the Company’s expectations, plans or forecasts of future events and views as of the date of this Overview. The Company anticipates that subsequent events and developments will cause these assessments to change. While the Company may elect to update these forward-looking statements at some point in the future, the Company explicitly disclaims any obligation to do so. These forward-looking statements speak only as of the date of this Overview and should not be relied upon as representing the Company’s assessments as of any date subsequent to the date of this Overview. Historical results are not necessarily indicative of future performance of the Company.
